Seven Candidates Seek Council Offices

Royce And Lunkes Vie For Top Spot

With Student Council elections for the 1966-67 term being only one week away, a total of seven candidates have thus far tossed their hats into the political arena. Attention is focusing on the presidential race in which two candidates are seeking office.

Both of the presidential candidates are juniors planning to graduate in June of 1967. History major Tom Royce from Chicago and finance major Mike Lunkes also from Chicago are the two students actively seeking the Council's number-one spot.

Royce is a graduate of Chicago's Saint George High School where he was a member of the student council, president of the Teen Club and president of his freshman homeroom. In his three years at Saint Joseph's, Royce has been active in organizing the "New Breed," a group of students promoting school spirit. He has been a member of the Glee Club and has served on the Public Relations Committee.

Lunkes is an alumnus of Chicago's Saint Benedict High. While in high school he was sophomore class president, junior class treasurer and student council president. At Saint Joe's Lunkes has been on the Grievance and Social Committees, and this year he is president of the junior class.

In a statement made to Stuff, candidate Royce says: "My main objective is, quite naturally, the students. My efforts are aimed at the betterment of the entire student body—through organization, communication of ideas, and most of all unity. The students are the ones who deserve and must receive forward leadership and proper representation to the faculty and administration. I feel I am capable of giving them just this representation."

In his platform, candidate Lunkes offers improvements in the three main areas of social life, academics and general improvements. In the social realm, he has suggested that concerts be held on social weekends, mixers with girls' colleges in conjunction with away games, and buses to away mixers for a nominal fee. Under academics, Lunkes favors the establishment of smokers to promote faculty-student relations. For general improvements he suggests that freshmen be given all-night lights, that a television room be set up in the Halleck Center which would be away from noise, and that there be more phones installed on campus.

Voting will take place this Wednesday in the Halleck Center from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.

Missler, Tosto, And Reynard Head Three-Way VP Race

Three students, two juniors and one sophomore, have announced their intentions to run for the Student Council vice-presidency. The candidates seeking the office are Charles Reynard, a sophomore English major from Indianapolis; Norb Missler, a junior management major from Lima, Ohio; and junior marketing major Pete Tosto from Cicero, Ill.

Reynard is a graduate of Indianapolis Cathedral High. During his freshman year at Saint Joseph's he was class president. He has also been a member of the Columbian Players, WSJC news staff, Courier Club, Dance Committee and the Scholastic Committee. In response to the question, "Why do you want to be vice-president?" Reynard says: "A normal answer and a true one is 'Well, I want to work for the betterment of the school!' In my case, that answer is true, but not quite satisfying for the student looking for a concrete, practical answer. The only answer I can give is that I enjoy working for the school. In the final analysis, enjoyment should come from the job or it will be performed in no better than a mediocre way. For this reason I think I can do a good job as vice-president of the Student Council."

Missler, who attended Lima

Central Catholic where he was class treasurer and Mission President, is presently secretary of the Student Council. He states that "next year I will be the only one on campus that has served on the Student Council." Missler counts experience as his greatest asset.

The third candidate, Pete Tosto, is an alumnus of Fenwick High in Chicago. While at Saint Joseph's he has been on the Publicity Committee and is presently on the Prom Committee. Tosto outlines his platform points as follows: "To be an observant guide to the president, to have more meetings with hall reps, to be available to help other classes in social endeavors, and to present a good 'Little 500' and talent show."

If present trends continue, voters may force a run-off election with none of the vice-presidential candidates receiving a majority on the first ballot.

Vice-presidential hopefuls Norb Missler (left), Pete Tosto (center) and Charlie Reynard appear to be heading for a close election that may result in a run-off between the two top candidates on the first ballot.

Duncan And Franko Eye Offices Of Secretary And Treasurer Unopposed

Juniors Denny Duncan and Tom Franko are running unopposed for Student Council office. Duncan, a geology major, is after the office of secretary and Franko, a management major is seeking the treasurer's post. It is the first time in recent years that two Student Council candidates have been unopposed.

Last year a candidate ran unopposed for the treasurer's office, but lost to a write-in candidate. According to the poll conducted by the Stuff staff earlier this week, it is unlikely that this will happen again this year.

Duncan, the secretarial candidate, is from Lima, Ohio, where he attended Aquinas-Columbus High School. Since being at Saint Joe's, he has been secretary of the junior class, vice-president of the Young Democratic Club, and a member of the cross-country team.

The lone candidate for treasurer, Franko, is from Andrean High School in Gary. In high school he was treasurer of the student council, and for three years he was president of his home room. At Saint Joseph's he has been on the Disciplinary Committee and a member of the varsity football team.

ELECTION POLL

The results of Stuff's poll on the Student Council elections are printed below. The poll was conducted Tuesday evening among the freshmen and sophomores by means of a random survey of the dorms. Juniors and seniors were polled at the noon meal on Wednesday. On each of the polling forms, there appeared the statement: "Your choice does not mean that you will necessarily vote for that candidate on election day, but that you would vote for him if the election were today."

Presidential Criteria

For the 76th time spring is emerging on the Saint Joseph's campus. As it does, two questions face the student body: 1) Will the Halleck Center, after three barren years, finally have grass around it? and 2) Who should be the next Student Council president?

Early indications are that grass indeed will cover the once mud-slickened slopes leading to the Center. This question is on the verge of answering itself. However, the second question must be answered by someone else—the student body.

This spring two candidates have decided to seek the presidential office. Both are members of the class of '67, and both appear to have a fair amount of popular support. In the next week, as elections draw nearer, these two candidates will be continually in the eye of the student body. And what the student body sees and hears—that will determine the winner.

As we the students consider these two candidates, a number of points should be kept in mind. Among these are the qualities that a good Council leader must have—the ability to work with diverse personalities, an understanding of the purposes and functions of student government, an awareness of the policies of the college's administration, a genuine interest in student affairs, the ability to act with integrity on any issue facing the students, and a mind calloused to unjust criticism.

The president of a student body should be a good student in and out of the classroom. He should be able to address an audience of students, alumni and faculty, and then afterward lend a hand in cleaning up the assembly room. He should be, in a manner, both administrator and student.

Either Mike Lunkes or Tom Royce could fill these requirements. Perhaps one might do a better job of it than the other, but that is a matter for each student to decide himself. When making that decision, keep the qualities for a good student body president in mind. Platform promises mean nothing, for leadership is not based on promises. Rather it is inherent to a personality. Using good judgment, the students will select the man best suited for the position. It is up to us to determine who that man is.

STUFF Among Award Winners At Annual ICPA Convention

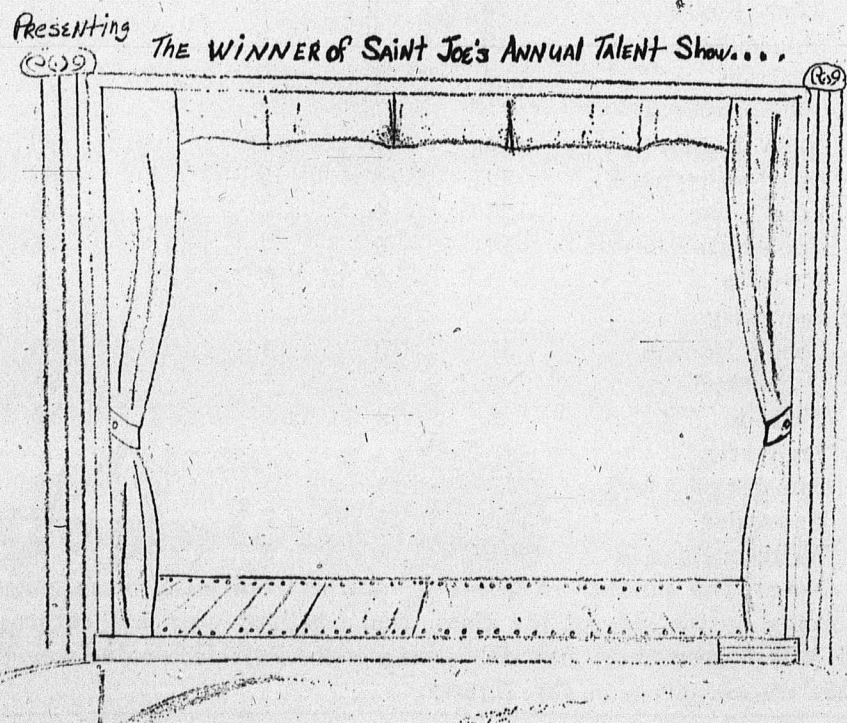

Saint Joseph's Stuff was among 11 Indiana student newspapers to win honors in the 1966 judging contest of the Indiana Collegiate Press Association. The awards were presented on Saturday, March 19, at the Association's seventh annual convention at Saint Francis College in Fort Wayne.

In all, Stuff won five awards. Sports editor Huck Quigley earned two of them—a first-place merit award for Best Sports Story (Oct. 21, 1965) and an honorable mention for Best Sports Column (Jan. 7, 1966). Honorable mentions were also won by editor Bob Lofft for Best News Story (theft of the Bellini painting) and by associate editor emeritus Jim Beier for Best Editorial on Any Non-campus Issue ("Anti-Viet Groups"). Stuff's fifth award was an honorable mention for Best Editorial Section.

In judging the newspapers, one first-place award and two honorable mentions were given in 19 different categories. Indiana University's Daily Student won 20 awards, more than one-third of the total number presented. Other college papers winning honors were: the Butler Collegian (8 awards), the Hanover Triangle (7 awards), the Purdue Exponent (6 awards), the Marion Journal (3 awards), the Anderson Andersonian (3 awards), the Marian Phoenix (2 awards), the Tri-State Tri-Angle, the Goshen Record and the Ball State News.

The I.C.P.A. has a membership of 26 collegiate newspapers. Judges for the contest were staff members of the Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal and Times.

INTERVIEW

Sen. Birch Bayh Discusses Vietnam And The Draft

Senator Birch Bayh (D-Ind.) spoke last Thursday, March 17, before a student assembly in the Saint Joseph's auditorium. In his address he confirmed the country's policy on the war in Vietnam and emphasized the importance of carrying out America's commitments to the Vietnam government.

Before his talk, the 37-year-old Senator granted a news conference to members of the local press and radio stations. On hand in the office of the college's president were Tom Gross of WSJC and Stuff's editor, Dave Muth. The following is the discussion that took place among the Senator, Gross and Muth.

WSJC: Senator, how do you think President Kennedy would have handled the Vietnam War if he were still in office? Do you believe that we would be out of Vietnam by now?

BAYH: Of course this is matter totally for speculation, but I will say, since you asked the question, probably not. The reason I say that is because there has been a such, and if you read the statements he made two or three days after this, they make no reference to this. The very controversial part is what he made extemporaneously in response to questions that were not a part of the prepared text. I did not hear these myself, so I'd rather not comment on them.

STUFF: Senator, why did you recently vote against the Ribicoff-Dominick bill? (This bill would have allowed a taxpayer to subtract from his tax bill a specified share of the amount he spends for college tuition and fees. Maximum credit would have been $325.)

BAYH: This is one of the most difficult bills that I have been confronted with. My major reason for voting against it is that it seems to me the way that it was drafted was very discriminatory. Anyone having a child in college and paying taxes would have received a maximum relief of $325. But anyone who does not pay taxes, if he be a member of the poor-great deal of escalation. We have to take great care that we do not allow this escalation to involve us in a world complication that could destroy civilization. The escalation has come from the communists. They are the ones that are putting in the additional number of troops and then we, as a result of a commitment that was made sometime ago and has been supported by three presidents from both political parties, have in turn brought in additional forces to try and sustain the position of the people who want to, oppose the communists in South Vietnam. I don't think we can say that there is a Johnson position, or a Kennedy position or an Eisenhower position.

WSJC: About two weeks ago Senator Bobby Kennedy made a proposal that would have the communists represented in any government in South Vietnam. Don't you think that this might have also been President Kennedy's position?

BAYH: There's a lot of discussion as to what Bobby Kennedy actually said and what people say he said. If one reads the prepared statement Senator Kennedy made, it does not make any reference whatsoever to the inclusion of the Viet Cong in the government as er class or if he be a member of the medium income bracket but has a large number of dependents, such a person does not get any relief from the federal government. So it seems to me that those who need it most are not getting any assistance at all.

STUFF: Do you have an alternate suggestion, Senator?

BAYH: What I had hoped we could do, since under the bill we would have been giving a taxpayer relief for having a child in school, in order to be equitable, it seems to me that you have to do the same thing for someone who does not have a tax liability but also has a child in school. If we could have done that, then I would have supported the bill.

STUFF: One more question, Senator. Do you feel that a student's grades should be used in determining whether or not he should be drafted while attending college? One student's curriculum may be more difficult than another's, and even though he may be the better student, he might still receive the lower grades.

BAYH: One thing that we must be careful of is that we do not create in this country an "intellectual elite" in which we have a class of our citizenry—a class of young men, if you will—who because of their intellectual capability feel that they do not have an obligation to their country. This was not the way our country was founded; we all have an obligation to protect the freedoms that were hard-won regardless of how much brain power we have. Now we have to make a determination somewhere along the line as to how we are going to meet our manpower requirements, and we have said in the past that so long as anyone is in school we are going to try to let them finish school before we ask them to fulfill their obligation. This seems to be a reasonable goal as long as we can do this and maintain our manpower requirements.

I think that we have to recognize the reality of the situation—that there are some people who would use this, not as a genuine desire to get an education, but as a subterfuge behind which they could hide to avoid fulfilling their military responsibilities to their country. And for this reason we have said that students should maintain a certain standard—that you should be making a good-faith effort, and that this would be the determination as to whether you were really interested in getting a good education or whether you're more interested in escaping the draft. This is how all this came about. I think it is extremely important that we recognize that our country isn't founded with anyone having privileges that others don't have. We all have a responsibility to answer our country's call when she needs us.

History tells us that Napoleon was a sawed-off little runt with big ideas and a blue print brain. When he was given a command in northern Italy, the army was undergoing a sound thrashing at the hands of its enemies. His men were tired of fighting. Most of them had been engaged in battle since the Revolution and were disgusted. They weren't getting anywhere; home was back over the Alps and the whole situation was as frustrating as a blind foreman in a telescope factory.

True, they had won a few contests in Holland, but all one had to do in those days to overcome the Dutch was kidnap the fat-fingered kids near the dykes and poof, the whole place was underwater. Scant reward for a prestige-seeking Frenchman.

Then along came this Bonaparte character who stepped up on a big

Charlemagne
Arneberg

box and built a fire under those guys that spread over Europe for a generation. "Nappy" was an inspiration—an organizer bold enough to turn his dares into textbooks at West Point. Without Brigitte Bardot, Napoleon would have been the best thing that hit France since sliced bread.

But that was over a century and a half ago. Why the historical tirade?

Napoleon
Bonaparte

Because here on our own campus, history has seen fit to draw a parallel. Among us today there is another Napoleon, and he is not nearly as unbeknownst as the former among his contemporaries.

James Charlemagne Arneberg is the best thing that has happened to Saint Joseph's sports program since the electric light. Arnie has had several commands here and there but none as prominent as the job he accepted here in 1965. Like the previous reference, his men had been taking it on the chin for several years. It was commonplace to expect defeat on the football field. Optimism was a sign of lunacy and the few victories which were secured were, indeed, worth celebrating. It seemed that no matter how "high" we were psyched, it was never quite high enough for a winning season.

Then Arneberg comes along. He immediately sunk his teeth into the matter at hand. His first couple of skirmishes were close but unsuccessful—on the scoreboard, that is. When the Pumas returned home from the Indianapolis offensive Arneberg, like Napoleon, climbed up on a box and built a fire in his Pumas. We weren't able to get a copy of Nappy's pre-Austerlitz speech (European newsmen were very slack in those days), but we do remember Charlemagne's "There's blood in that Puma" oratory in the Fieldhouse last October.

"What kind of Man is this that the winds obey Him," was once written of another great Orator. He too, was an Organizer. Arneberg has molded an esprit de corps in a year's time from a quagmire of frustration—oftentimes despair. We see him helping Bob Brown run the flag up the Post Office flagpole at 8:00 a.m. We see him with his engulfing smile and "goolooluscus" appetite in three public meals per day (God knows how many others there are.) We see his "I'm Norwegian" tag on his suitcoat St. Patrick's day and we wonder if he wasn't in the crows-nest when Lief Erickson first drifted over. We see members of all classes cry out, "Hi, Arnie" from every corner of the Collegeville scene and he is perpetual with a personal reply. We hear Alumni slip him tips concerning home-town boys and he is enthusiasm-personified. "Wonderful . . . glorious . . . charming," he'll say with a genuine appreciation. This is Jim Arneberg at play.

To see Jim Arneberg at work is to admire him. To watch his strategy and calculated daring is to idolize him, and to have the profound honor to play for him would have been the most precious possession of our athletic endeavors.

Jim Arneberg is a legend in his own time. Eighty per cent of our readers can't wait to share in the benefits he is expected to reap here next fall and the other twenty percent wish they had another year to participate actively in his "Back to the Top" program.

We point to Jim Arneberg when we are looking for a good image for our brothers to follow and we respect him like no other when his head is bent in thanksgiving to the One he knows is most responsible.

Doc Miller's "Shots" Needle Seniors, 40-38

RENSSELAER, Ind. — Saint Joseph's faculty, in extending their winning streak to five straight over the senior Monogram Club members, pinned the Hero button on a new chest March 22 in a 40-38 comeback victory.

Dr. Alva Miller, Rensselaer dentist and Puma fang authority, calmly stepped to the line and sank two free throws in the last thirty seconds to win the traditional keg and the ball game. The faculty has glomaged five victories in the seven-game series initiated in 1959 for the support of the local orphanage.

A healthy crowd of over 500 bore witness to an apparent rout in the first half as the Club ran up a 26-12 lead over Father Banet's Red-shirts. Father Banet assumed the head coach job in a political coup from former coach, Dick Flynn. Flynn, it was rumored, remained as assistant and "brains" of the outfit.

Coach Jim Holstein, noted "Academician," led the Faculty with a dozen counters—mostly scored after Coach Jim Arneberg was dismissed for attempting to raze Alumni Fieldhouse. Arneberg was formerly a guard, but in another connection.

Father Ranly chipped in eight points for the old timers followed by Bob Wood with six. Wood's points came in the second half rally in which he Aristotled three consecutive fast breaks. Father McCabe, an able rookie, added five. Frank Frasier led the vanquished with seven, followed by Bernie Gustenhoven (six), Jim Metzinger (five) and Jim Kelly and Denny Berner (four apiece).

Coach Flynn, who has helped guide the faculty through five straight undefeated seasons, was beside himself at the training table following the game. "We beat 'em with superior training," Flynn remarked from behind a can of beer. "We set 'em up with that half-time lead, assuming there would be refreshment in the locker room. When we were shut-out down there, the boys were thirsty and we told Wood and Father Ranly to get out there and psych 'em."

Terry Davisson and Tom Crowley, coaches of the Lettermen, also had a few comments for the press after the fiasco.

"You can't beat seven men," Davisson griped as he poured for the winners. It was his second loss as head coach in the last three years and he is now the losingest coach in the series.

Crowley laid plans for the last shot in a huddle just after Miller's two free throws established a lead. "We had

Glee Club To Host Indiana Choral Festival Sunday

Saint Joseph's Glee Club will host the tenth annual Indiana Catholic College Choral Festival on this Sunday, March 27. The program will feature a combined chorus of nearly 300 men and women presenting the premier performance of "An American Requiem." The composition is a tribute to the late President John F. Kennedy by Dr. John Egan of Saint Joseph's Music Department.

The festival will begin at 3:00 p.m. in Alumni Fieldhouse. There will be no charge for admission.

Colleges represented in the festival include Xavier University of Cincinnati which is sending 51 men, a delegation of 60 men and women from Marian College in Indianapolis, and 70 girls from Saint Mary-of-the-Woods College in Terre Haute. Also participating are 11 girls from Saint Benedict College in Ferdinand, Ind., and 38 coeds from Saint Francis College in Fort Wayne.

The Indiana Catholic College Choral Festival was initiated on April 21, 1956 when 160 students from five colleges took part in the festival on the Saint Joseph's campus. Since then the event has been presented at the other member colleges on a rotating basis. The festival was first organized largely through the efforts of Father Lawrence Heiman, chairman of the Music Department, who was at that time director of the Saint Joe Glee Club.

The directors of the choruses coming to Rensselaer March 27 are Sister Marie Brendan, S.P., of Saint Mary-of-the-Woods, Alexander McDonald of Marian College, John Yonkman of Saint Francis College, Sister M. Pierre, O.S.B., of Saint Benedict College, John Michael Ward of Xavier, and Dr. Egan.

The Requiem is Dr. Egan's longest and most ambitious compositional undertaking. It will be performed for the first time March 27 here, but will have additional performances when the Singing Seventeen from Saint Joseph's College tour the Eastern cities with the Madrigal Singers of Saint Mary-of-the-Woods College during Easter vacation. It will also be sung by the Teresan Chorus from the College of Saint Teresa in Winona, Minnesota, and the Saint Joseph's College Glee Club at the College-Conservatory of Music of Cincinnati, Wednesday, April 20, on the eve of the glee club's appearance at the national convention of the National Catholic Music Educators Association.

it all worked out," Bones cried, "But its tough to map strategy with a football player."

With the exception of ironman Holstein, Professor Lake and a couple of others who hit the floor with driving determination, the faculty is ready to go again next year. "All we have to do is win next year," Bob Wood offered. "Once Merki (Don) is back, they won't touch us for a generation."

Story: With Mom and Dad away, two teenage girls decide to use the telephone to make crank calls. The line: I saw what you did and I know who you are." It would have been a nice little game except that one of the persons called has just carved up his wife and buried her in the woods. The girls think he's cute though and call him again. The murderer traces the call and the fun begins. Rated: above average. "GLORY GUYS" College Auditorium, Sunday at 10:00 p.m. Even TIME magazine stayed away from this one; so should the audience.

"I don't want to talk about it."

We don't want to talk about it if we don't have it. Or if we do have it. Or if someone close died of it. Cancer exists. You can't afford to say you don't want to talk about it. Cancer is not necessarily a death sentence. Because many cancers can be cured if detected early and treated promptly. A health check-up once a year, every year, is your best protection.

Science today is able to save 1 in 3 cancer patients. It could save 1 in 2. If people went to their doctors in time.

"I don't want to talk about it" is not enough of an answer to the challenge of cancer. Do something about it. Fight cancer. With a checkup. And a check to your local Unit of the
